UConn Student Life Award!

$1,000 Student Veteran Scholarship

The “Willis N. Hawley Service & Leadership Award” recognizes a student veteran(s) who has made significant contributions to the University community through leadership and service during their tenure as a student.

The deadline is February 26th to apply for this award.

Go to http://sla.uconn.edu/ for detailed information on how to apply, or nominate someone.
How does it feel to be wanted?

It’s a reality that employers are actively seeking out veterans, service members, and military spouses. Companies desire the traits that come with military service: loyalty, grit, ability to think under pressure, the list goes on. What you may not realize is that it is incredibly difficult for employers to find or identify this group of people—so difficult in fact that there are task forces in our own state who’s mission it is to find you. Make no mistake, I get asked regularly to share job and internship opportunities with vets but guess what? Same problem.

Help me help you. What we have done is hooked you up with a dedicated place to upload your résumé which will be shared with recruiters. The fancy term for it is a “résumé book” and it allows companies to find candidates without the hassle of posting jobs and sorting through hundreds of résumés. Here is how you are going to find it:

Cadet Samantha Stilwell is a senior at the University of Connecticut majoring in Nursing. Cadet Stilwell was motivated to join AFROTC after receiving support from her family members who described their military experiences as amazing and ones they will never forget. She also has always wanted to travel and see the world. Samantha maintains excellent academic and physical fitness standards required of Air Force ROTC cadets, while working two jobs, one of them as a student employee in the Air Force Uniform Room. Cadet Stilwell enjoys snowboarding, basketball, lacrosse and hiking in addition to baking, knitting and reading. We are honored to select Cadet Samantha Stilwell as Air Force Cadet of the Month. She is an exceptional cadet that is successful in her rigorous academic pursuits as well as possessing a positive energy she displays to the cadet core and cadre members.

“Be ready to put yourself forward and work hard for what you want. Definitely take all the opportunities presented to you and use them to improve yourself”, says Cadet Samantha Stilwell.

Staying up to date with Husky Air Force ROTC

The Air Force ROTC cadets of Detachment 115 at the University of Connecticut are looking forward to Warrior Day that is coming up in this semester. Warrior Day will take place during Leadership Lab on February 11 in the Armory. Warrior Day consists of physical challenges that allow cadets to expand their skills and knowledge on teamwork, physical strength and endurance and problem solving. The primary and central objectives to Air Force Warrior Day activities are to improve cadet leadership and cadet teamwork. Warrior Day physical challenges mirror the Ranger Challenge activities that Army ROTC cadets encounter. These activities and challenges include combat crawls, agility runs, push-up endurance, log lifts, and boat runs. A typical course for Air Force cadets would include doing combat crawls with “dummy” weapons (cadets crawl as close to the ground as possible ten yards), agility runs using cones, a set of fast and numerous quality pushups, followed by cadets working in teams to lift a log weighing several hundred pounds. Air Force cadets look forward to Warrior Day each semester and are looking forward to their upcoming day on February 11.
